Ask The Expert

Q: Back to school, Back to germs: What's the best way to build a strong immune system?

A: A healthy immune system isn't built overnight-it's supported by our daily habits. As the school year begins and we are more exposed to germs focus on the foundations of wellness: quality sleep, nutrient rich meals, regular outdoor activity, hydration, and stress management. Since 70% of our immune system is connected to the gut, eating fiber rich foods and incorporating probiotics may help with immune health. Key nutrients like Vitamin C, Vitamin D, and Zinc can also provide additional support when dietary intake falls short.

Starting these healthy habits before the school year begins can help your family build resilience and stay healthier throughout the school year.
